

To understand the real impact of hereditary angioedema (HAE)

Look at these survey results

What does living with HAE really mean? The results show us that its impact can go beyond attacks.

The emotional toll of HAE

In a 2017 survey of 445 people with HAE

50% said they experienced anxiety

In a 2019 survey of 168 people with HAE

45% felt severely stressed*

55% were concerned about attacks worsening in the future†

Day-to-day life with HAE

In a 2007-2008 survey of 457 people with HAE

reported that HAE prevented them from applying for certain types of jobs

reported that HAE impacted their career advancement

“ Sometimes it'd be a week between attacks, sometimes 3 weeks to a month. It wasn't so much the being sick part that was hard—it was the impact that being unreliable had on me.

Matt, Living with HAE

Start a conversation

Share this information with anyone who would benefit from learning about the real impact of HAE.

*Only 159 participants provided a response to this section of the survey.

†Only 160 participants provided a response to this section of the survey.

